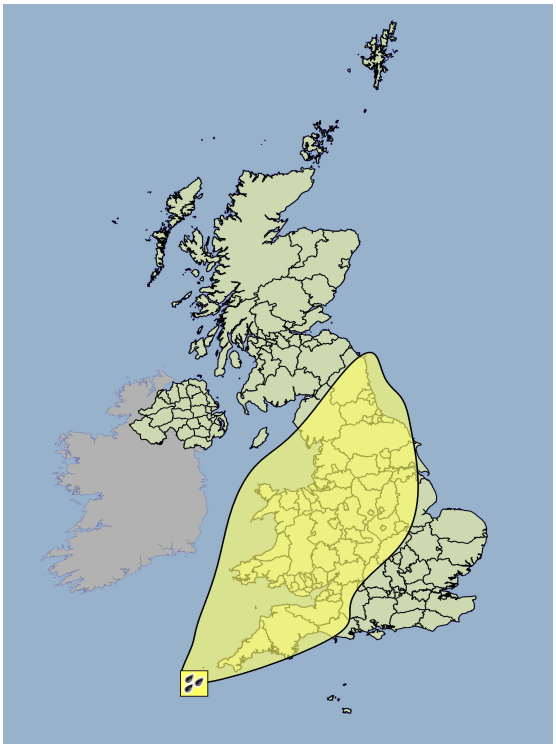
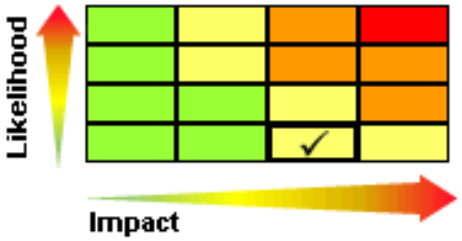
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Bands of rain will become slow-moving across parts of the UK on Friday and Saturday. Some locally heavy and persistent rainfall is expected, particularly across Wales and parts of England. This may cause some flooding from rivers or surface water. There is still significant uncertainty as to where and when the heaviest rainfall and greatest impacts will occur, so this Alert will be updated on Thursday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Fri, 06th Sep 2013 until 23:59 on Sat, 07th Sep 2013

Periods of heavy and persistent rain are likely to affect parts of England and Wales during Friday and Saturday.

The public should be aware that there is a risk of localised disruption due to flooding.
